

The Beast

The beast in my picture is a savage siren. Her name is Oceana. Oceana eats fish mostly but when she is lucky a person comes along for her food.

Oceana wears a green top made out of seaweed. On her head she wears the skull of her enemies on a crown. Her teeth are always stained red from her feast the day before. Dry skin is all she knows: her skin is constantly dry and scaly. Stained red nails sit on her webbed hand waiting to be cut. Sharp teeth are her knife and fork; her teeth are so sharp that they could make you bleed as soon as you touch them. Shockingly, her tongue looks like a snake's, split in the middle.

The reason she knocks on boats is so that they get scared and she gets to take their oars and things that they drop in the water. The main reason is because she likes the taste of scared humans.

Amy Hatton
6 Oak